Coming, an Octopus Fight Only Dead Ones, Please Throw in Free Garage The Star, 1927 Years Ago

ROYAL DUTCH, a British oil company, plants itself at Bayonne, N. J., next to Standard Oil, to give that experienced old octopus a battle. The British company resents the gobbling up of Russia's oil by Standard Oil.

To gain a footing the "Dutch" company paid $2,000,000 for the Columbia Oil Company's Bayonne refinery.

It should be an interesting fight, and, judging by past performances, the British company, sooner or later, will know how the canary felt inside of the cat.

Of course the canary MIGHT swallow the cat, but that doesn't happen, usually.

Texas wants bank bandits, and wants them dead. Texas banks carry this sign: "$5,000 for each dead bank robber—not one cent for 100 live ones."

Banks don't want live robbers because they are hard to identify, hard to convict, hardly ever kept in the penitentiary after going there.

This may discourage bank robbing. It will impress on bank robbers the fact that they must kill first, or be killed.

Marshall Field, 3d., will build for Chicago "the largest apartment building in the world," occupying two blocks, with 3,000 rooms. The apartments are for men earning moderate salaries, postmen, store clerks, policemen, etc. Mr. Field hopes to discourage race suicide by making room for children at reasonable rents.

Four million dollars of the money accumulated by his grandfather will be spent by Marshall Field, 3d., who follows the example set by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company and by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in New York city.

Mr. Field might add to his apartment a garage with little wired-off spaces, little country club lockers, but bigger, in which each tenant could keep his little car. That would cost little more.

FINGERPRINTS SHOW SHE WAS INVOLVED IN SLAYING OF GIRL

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 24 (A.P.)—Fingerprints found in the Bellevue Arms apartment here of William E. Hickman, confessed kidnaper of little Marion Parker, today definitely connected a woman with the murder, police announced. The fingerprints were found on a milk bottle and a dinner plate.

Los Angeles, Dec. 24.—A slender strand of hair, found on a dresser in his Los Angeles apartment, is believed to be the strongest link in the chain of evidence the police are forging that will send William Hickman to the gallows for the murder of 12-year-old Marion Parker.

This strand of hair was found in a further investigation of Hickman's quarters and Police Chemist Welch asserted it was identical with the strands of Marion's hair.

New evidence found in the Bellevue Arms apartment has enabled police to reconstruct what they believe to be details of the murder of the schoolgirl. Hickman is being held in Pendleton, Ore., for the Los Angeles authorities. He has been indicted on charges of kidnaping and murdering the child.

In the apartment the police found ten bars of soap, partly used though Hickman had only occupied the apartment two weeks. In the bathroom were found two cans of cleaning powder which had been copiously used.

Provincetown, Dec. 24.—A woman who waited all night, alone, in the Union Station at Providence for Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur accompanied him today to the scene of the S4 disaster.

She is Mrs. M. L. Stevens of Providence, mother of one of the six men entombed in the submarine's torpedo chamber.

"It was only a few hours for me to wait," she said. "Poor Joe had waited 148 hours in the submarine."

Mrs. Stevens came over the road with Wilbur and Admiral Charles F. Hughes, chief of naval operations.

WINTER'S COLDEST DAY SENDS BULB DOWN TO 14

Residents of Greater Boston awoke today to the coldest day of the Winter.

POPE FLAYS MEXICO'S PERSECUTION OF CHURCH

Rome, Dec. 24 (A.P.)—Pope Pius, responding to Christmas greeting from the College of Cardinals today, said that he wondered why all civilized governments did not arise to put an end to the persecutions of the Church in Mexico, Russia and China.

The pontiff characterized the persecutions as "savage and barbarous episodes unequalled in cruelty and atrocities hardly believable."

LISTS YEAR'S JOYS.

Conditions in Mexico, Russia and China, the pontiff listed among the sorrows of the year just past. Among the joys he mentioned were the celebrations in honor of the Immaculate heart in Bolivia and Peru, creation of the first native Japanese bishop, the ardent preparations for the eucharistic congress at Sydney, inauguration of the missionary exposition and of regional seminaries in Italy and the success of local eucharistic congress in Italy, Germany and France.

The pontiff protested against imputation of political motives to him in the banning of L'Action Francaise, and regretted the persistence of the French monarchists in continuing to repeat what he characterized as absurdities.

However, the Pontiff rejoiced at the many manifestations of loyalty on the part of French Catholics, and in the publication of a recent work on the L'Action Francaise controversy entitled "Why the Pope Has Spoken."

CARDINAL'S GREETINGS.

Pope Pius pointed with pride to the development of religious education in Italian schools, and concluding said he was optimistic concerning the missionary exposition and of

'DAWN' PLANE 9 HOURS OVERDUE; LAST SEEN FLYING OVER CAPE COD

With Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson and her transatlantic flight plane, the Dawn, nine hours overdue at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, and believed to have been forced down in New England waters or on the New England shore, search for the daring woman flier was launched today along 1,000 miles of coast line.

The Dawn, which has three men aboard in addition to Mrs. Grayson, was last sighted last night at 7:25, soaring over the French cable station at Orleans on Cape Cod.

It was due at Harbor Grace, 1,200 miles from its starting point, New York, at 7 o'clock this morning.

Severe northwest winds raised grave fear that the giant bird's chances of making the Newfoundland haven, in the opinion of aviation experts, who aided today that it is likely that ice-coated wings forced the plane down.

The fact that there was no snow storm between here and Newfoundland was counted as a point in the plane's favor. Moreover, the plane had glycerine smeared on its wings, to keep the ice from forming.

'Tis Night Before Xmas But Somebody IS Stirring!

MISTER KRIS KRINGLE IS AMONG MOST RECENT ARRIVALS

Perhaps all through the house there may not be a mouse, but there are millions of thrilly little folk (and big ones, too!) who are on the tiptoe of expectancy as a certain kindly old gentleman speeds along his merry road on the highway of good cheer. Not the least among these expectant millions is Dorothy Ripley of Braintree, who posed for this photograph.

FIND CLUES TO CONVICT HICKMAN

Other clues found there included blood stained towels, missing parts of newspapers which had been wrapped around parts of the small girl's body, improvised gloves believed to have been made to keep the child from leaving fingerprints and a large butcher knife, also half of a nut shell, the other half of which was found in a pocket of the slain girl's dress.

If the crime was committed by Hickman alone, the police believe that the girl was lured to the apartment by the story that her father had been carried there after he was injured.

In the police reconstruction of the murder they believe that Marion, once in the apartment, was fed by Hickman, and told that if she made no outcry she would not be injured.

The child then apparently was bound and gagged and police believe Hickman gave her an anaesthetic to make certain she would be there when he returned. Police believe that on one occasion when he returned he found her in such condition that it would require a physician to revive her, or else be found her dead.

Confronted with the necessity of disposing of the body Hickman, it is believed, dismembered it in the bathroom in order to carry it from the apartment. The dismembered parts were wrapped in pieces of newspapers.

Hickman then scrubbed the bathtub thoroughly, missing only a few stains, the police believe. The bundles with parts of the Pendleton, Ore., Dec. 24.—Told point blank that police had evidence that he had killed Marian Parker in his apartment in Los Angeles, William Edward Hickman, replied to the Associated Press today: "That is not true. I did not do it."

"Under the California law you face death for what you already confessed," he was told.

"I can't help it," replied Hickman steadily, and with apparent frankness. "I have told the truth. I will feel better to go that way than to have to tell a lie."

"The police have learned that you used ten bars of soap and two cans of cleaning powder in removing blood stains in your apartment after Marion was killed," Hickman was told by the correspondent.

"That's not true," he answered. "When I told that he might be taken back to Los Angeles in an airplane, Hickman showed more than a little interest.

"I've never been in a plane," he said, and then as an afterthought he added, "and I hope it goes down, too."

Hundreds of East Boston commuters had a frigid hike to the tunnel today in the morning rush hour when a car was derailed on the loop inside the Maverick square terminal.

The line-up stalled service on all the East Boston lines and cars were halted in a string from the terminal to Central square.

After half an hour an emergency crew got the car back on the rails and it was pushed out of the way of other cars.

The forecast for Boston and vicinity was:

Fair and continued cold tonight and Sunday; strong northwest winds this afternoon, diminishing tonight.

Meteorologist Loveland said the cold wave was due to a low pressure area that developed off the Maine coast and that the high pressure area had moved from Iowa, where it was centred yesterday, to South Dakota.

Coolidge Greetings From M'Millan in Labrador

Washington, Dec. 24 (A.P.)—Christmas greeting to President and Mrs. Coolidge reached the White House today from the wastes of North Labrador through the assistance of an amateur radio operator in Hudson, Mass.

The message came from Donald MacMillan on behalf of members of the Field Museum Scientific Expedition, it was picked up by Donald Meserve at Hudson, who relayed it to the White House over commercial telegraph lines at his own expense.

MacMillan radioed:

"Members of the Field Museum Scientific Expedition, stationed in North Labrador, send greetings and wish you and Mrs. Coolidge a very happy Christmas and a most enjoyable New Year."

Meserve did not mention his own part in the transmission of the message, but President Coolidge was so much interested in seeing the Labrador date line on it that he had inquiries made of the telegraph company. He then promptly dispatched a letter to MacMillan in care of the Field Museum at Chicago and another to Meserve, thanking him for his courtesy.

The office of the Buenos Aires branch of the First National Bank was erected in 1924 and is described by architects as one of the most beautiful office buildings in South America. It is twelve stories high, of concrete construction and stands on a triangular plot at the corner of two of the principal business streets of the Argentina capital, Calle Florida and Bartolome Mitre. Its architecture adapts a Spanish renaissance style to modern structural requirements. The elaborately sculptured facade of its main entrance and huge bronze doors attract attention.

POLICE BELIEVE GIRL KILLED IN EFFORT TO KEEP HER QUIET

'Tis Night Before Xmas But Somebody IS Stirring!

MISTER KRIS KRINGLE IS AMONG MOST RECENT ARRIVALS

Perhaps all through the house there may not be a mouse, but there are millions of thrilly little folk (and big ones, too!) who are on the tiptoe of expectancy as a certain kindly old gentleman speeds along his merry road on the highway of good cheer. Not the least among these expectant millions is Dorothy Ripley of Braintree, who posed for this photograph.

Other clues found there included stained towels, missing parts of newspapers which had been wrapped around parts of the small girl's body, improvised gloves believed to have been made to keep the child from leaving fingerprints and a large butcher knife, also bereft of a nut shell, the other half of which was found in a pocket of the slain girl's dress.

If the crime was committed by Hickman alone, the police believe that the girl was lured to the apartment by the story that her father had been carried there after he was injured.

In the police reconstruction of the murder they believe that Marian was in the apartment was for by Hickman, and that if she made no outcry she would not be injured.

The child then apparently was bound and gagged and police believe Hickman gave her an anesthetic to make certain she would be there when he returned. They believe that on one occasion when he returned he found her in such condition that it would require a physician to revive her, or else he found her dead.

Confronted with the necessity of disposing of the body Hickman, it is believed, dismembered it in the bathroom in order to carry it from one apartment. The dismembered parts were wrapped in pieces of newspapers.

Hickman then scrubbed the bathtub thoroughly, missing only a few stains, the police believe. The bundles with parts of the

"Under the California law you face death for what you already confessed," he was told.

"I can't help it," replied Hickman steadily and with apparent frankness. "I have told the truth. I will feel better to go that way than to have to tell it."

The police have learned that you used ten bars of soap and two cans of cleaning powder in removing blood stains in your apartment after Marian was killed," Hickman was told by the correspondent.

"That's not true," he answered.

When told that he might be taken back to Los Angeles in an airplane, Hickman showed more than a little interest.

"I've never been in a plane," he said, and then as an after-thought he added, "and I hope it goes down, too."

Coolidge Greetings From M'Millan in Labrador

Washington, Dec. 24 (A.P.)—Christmas greeting to President and Mrs. Coolidge reached the White House today from the wastes of North Labrador through the assistance of an amateur radio operator in Hudson, Mass.

The message came from Donald MacMillan on behalf of members of the Field Museum Sonderide Expedition. It was picked up by Donald Meserve at Hudson, who relayed it to the White House over commercial telegraph lines at his own expense.

MacMillan radioed:

"Members of the Field Museum Scientific Expedition, stationed in North Labrador, send greetings and wish you and Mrs. Coolidge a very happy Christmas and a most enjoyable New Year."

Meserve did not mention his own part in the transmission of the message, but President Coolidge was so much interested in seeing the Labrador date line on it that he had inquiries made of the telegraph company. He then promptly dispatched a letter to MacMillan in care of the Field Museum at Chicago and another to Meserve, thanking him for his courtesy.

Washington, Dec. 24 (A.P.)—The national capital turned aside all other interests today and entered into its preparations for the observance of Christmas.

Festivities will be this evening on the south lawn of the Treasury where President Coolidge will light a stately spruce by pushing a gold button to flood the boughs with colored lines. Singing of Christmas carols will follow.

Mrs. Coolidge directed the work of putting up five Christmas trees in the White House. Under the boughs of one of them she arranged a miniature reproduction of the nativity in Jerusalem.

Secretary of Labor Davis will spend Christmas in Washington, with Mrs. Davis and their five children. Likewise Secretaries Kellogg, Jardine, Hoover, Davis of the war department and Attorney General Sargent elected to observe the holidays here. Secretary and Mrs. Wilbur and Secretary and Mrs. Work will spend the day with relatives.

He conveyed to the Pontiff the greetings of all the members of the Sacred College and expressed the hope that the Pope may be preserved "for many years to come at the head of the Catholic Church for the complete triumph of religion even in countries where it has been persecuted."

B. Nason Hamlin Returns From Hunting Trip in South to Join Family for Xmas

CHRISTMAS IS HERE. THE DAY OF DAYS FOR EVERY childish heart. It's here with its softly gleaming taper; lighted at twilight, with its merry interchanges of good wishes; with its burdened trees and its stockings hung by the chimney side awaiting the coming of the Good Saint Nicholas. This evening, at dusk, a thousand star-like points of light spring out from myriad windows; carolers pace slowly in time with the olden tunes they sing. It's the one day essentially devoted to celebration by the family's own fireside. Or, perhaps, by the hearthstone of the next of kin, the gathering about festal boards by several generations intent on celebrating the good old day in the good old way.

THE "BIRD" THAT GRACES EVERY HOLIDAY TABLE TAKES on various forms, and for the B. Nason Hamlins is likely to be not the proverbial lord of the barnyard, but a duck. In fact, a brace of ducks, for Mr. Hamlin is but just back from ten days of shooting in the South with a bag laden with spoils. His annual shooting trip South takes him to that very smart sporting aggregation frequenting the Santee Club, down on the South Carolina waterfront, where sand and marsh attract the feathered ones of the air and, consequently, the Nimrods who would bring them down.

ESSENTIALLY THE FAMILY CELEBRATION IS THE HAMLIN observance of Christmas. It commences with dinner one day at the Hamlin establishment in Dedham, and next day moves over to the Francis Peabody place in Milton, called "Highfield." The Hamlins and the Peabodys and the Prowses and their kin, young and old, are included in the family connection that makes a three-day holiday for Christmas. Hospitality is a watchword with all, and generally lacks nothing of spontaneity, and all the more enjoyable for that.

DINNER FOR NEARLY A SCORE OF GUESTS GOES ON WITH tree accompaniments at the Cohasset home of Mrs. T. Frederick Stoddard. The dinner is to be enormous and the tree more so, and all the Menard and Wilcutt and Stoddard family connection comes in for the spread. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Menard, and the three small Menards, are in the circle. Mrs. Menard and Mrs. Stoddard are sisters, and have for brother that fine host and ardent yachtsman, Joseph Wilcutt. Mr. and Mrs. Menard have in their Cohasset home the epitome of hospitality, and after the Stoddard dinner they take their turn with a Christmas celebration for the younger set.

EVEN THE SCENT OF HOLLY AND MISTLETOE CANNOT completely blot out for "Colonel" Wilcutt, master of the band, some snorting "Mermett," the tang of the sea. Even now, at Christmas, like the confirmed sailor he is, Colonel Wilcutt is making plans for late Winter or early Spring cruises Southward. His "Mermett" is a familiar sight in Southern waters, where the world of wealth and leisure abounds, and the ocean sparkles, in the region between the St. John's River on the north and Cuba and Nassau on the south and east.

EVEN THOUGH SO DISTINCTLY OF BOSTON'S ELECT, MRS FREDERIC CAMERON CHURCH is true to her first love, the Gotham world and its fashionables. So she and Mrs. Church and the family group of Vanderbilts that celebrate the big day in the big city. I believe Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt, mater to Mrs. Church and Mrs. Earl E. T. Smith, is gathering her daughters and their spouses beneath her roof-tree in Manhattan. Quite naturally, Mrs. Church has closest affiliations with and affection for New York, since she was Miss Muriel Vanderbilt and a top notcher in the most widely known social set in the universe.

ONE GIRL IN BOSTON WHO'S WISHING CHRISTMAS AND all its gaieties to pass quickly is Miss Katharine Howe, daughter of the Dudley R. Howes of Brookline. On Tuesday she goes over to New York to be a feted debutante in the Big City and the centre of bud festivities that go on up to Friday. On Tuesday her aunt and uncle on the paternal side, Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Howe, are giving a large dinner for more than half a hundred guests, and, later, they all go on to the big and brilliant ball Mr. and Mrs. Harold Irving Pratt give for their daughter Eleanor.

WITH MISS KATHARINE HOWE GO HER PARENTS. THE Dudley Howes, to Gotham for the festive days and evenings. And not so very long after they all come home there is a Boston presentation on the cards for Miss Howe, a big dinner and theatre party set for mid-January. All the formality of a debut would have been gotten through with earlier in the season, but for a period of bereavement observed by the family. Now the bud is fairly launched, or will be by Tuesday, and the season for her (a bit belated) in full swing. Her place in the social scheme and her personal popularity are bright auguries for immense success.

OLD-FASHIONED NEW ENGLAND HOSPITALITY, SPICED with a dash of Metropolitan flavor, with Mrs. Nathaniel Franklin Emmons the hostess, and her fine old mansion in Hingham the setting, is regularly the holiday order of things. There's always a tree set up with gifts of the sort Mrs. Emmons invariably chooses with unerring taste. And there's dancing, usually, and some novelty of entertainment—perhaps a fortune teller. And then, there's a buffet supper, delectable as can be. The Emmons' circle includes the Frank Minots and the Judd Deweys, the Jacob Rogerses and the Richard Lawrences, and the one drawback is that everyone has so good a time they never want to go home.

MANY-WINDOWED "BRACKENSIDES," THE AUGUSTUS Goodwin country place, in Hamilton, will gleam with candle light this Christmas Eve. A big family-friends house party is domiciled in this magnificent home for the holiday celebration. A Yule log for the enormous hooded fireplace, and a tree for the people on the estate, and a dinner perfect in detail and accompaniment are features of the Goodwins' observances. Miss Betty Harrell's and Miss Frances Goodwin's young set friends predominate in the house party, with, of course, more than a sprinkling of the elders. Brackensides is an enormous place, fitted to receive a small army of guests.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS FOR "LITTLE HOUSE" IS ONE GOOD deed the Junior League accomplished by its sale of Christmas greens. Their two-day sale by motor, supplemented by house to house calls, netted most satisfying financial results. Miss Betty Moulton, Mrs. Gardner Coolidge and Miss Louise Batchelder, vet erans at "doing things" successfully, engineered the sale, and probationary Leaguers of this year's crop did the trick of selling. Results are really way beyond expectation. And now Miss Betty Moulton, having polished off the Little House sale, turns to another engrossing affair, the benefit lecture by Lowell Thomas, that is sponsored by all those smart matrons interested in the Junior Division of the S. P. C. C.

NOT EVEN THE JUNIOR DIVISION'S HOLIDAY FESTIVITY for its little wards diminishes one iota the magnitude of its preparations for the New Year's big event, so far as the Junior Division itself is concerned—the Thomas lecture. Miss Moulton has the enormous task of filling a program with advertising before January 5 rolls around with the evening of the lecture. The smart backing that is the society's and the staff working for the lecture these two factors certainly spell success.

JACK FROST IS INDEED CONSIDERATE OF THE COUNTRY Club coterie that loves to put on gleaming skates and twirl over the Club's outdoor rink. A gleaming expanse of ice awaits over the curves of the spirals and figure eights. You may be very sure that the Olympic Team members are missing no opportunity to add a bit of the practice that makes perfection of their art. Mrs. Theresa Weld Blanchard and Nathaniel W. Niles are on the ice whenever opportunity offers. Miss Maribel Vinson, the slim young girl who may be herself a national champion, some day, is likewise devoted to practice, and so are Roger Turner and Miss Beatrice Laughlin. These Olympians intend to wrest laurels from all comers, if continuous practice can accomplish it.

MOTHER BITTER TO WILBUR

On arrival here she was bitter over the loss of her son, bitter against Secretary Wilbur.

"The navy cares nothing for life," she declared, at the conclusion of her ride with the navy's head. All reference to the disaster was avoided by the navy secretary during the trip, she said.

"I come down here to see the spot where my boy Joe is at the bottom of the sea. I learned more in five minutes than I did all the time I was with Secretary Wilbur and Admiral Hughes.

"They got me out so smoothly that I didn't realize what was happening. They left me almost before I knew it.

"I blame the navy for this. They have no right to send down submarines if they have no means of raising them."

CONFERENCE ON FALCON.

Mrs. Stevens was cared for by Red Cross officials while Secretary Wilbur and Admiral Hughes went out to the mine sweeper Falcon for a conference with Rear Admiral Frank H. Brumby.

The trip to the Falcon was made in the face of a 45-mile gale and tumbling seas, which earlier in the day had caused a cessation of salvage operations.

A shift in wind caused the Falcon to slip her moorings after all diving operations had been called off, and it was necessary to discontinue the pumping of air into the S4. The airlines were capped and buoyed.

WILBUR COMING TO HUB.

Before work was called off for the day, three divers had narrow escapes from death when their airlines became entangled due to the violent pitching of the Falcon above them.

Following the conference aboard the salvage fleet flagship, Secretary Wilbur will leave for Boston and a destroyer.

Word was received here today that Joseph McGinley, father of the S4's ecstive officer, stated upon his return home to Norristown, Pa., that he had been given the "brush" in the navy's polite, diplomatic way." He said he wished to return to Provincetown following his meeting the Falcon with Rear Admiral Brumby but was informed he was to be sent to Boston on a navy vessel. Somebody even paid his hotel bill, he said.

Provincetown will mark its saddest Christmas Eve tonight when a memorial service for the officers and men of the S4 will be held on a pier jutting into the harbor.

Prayers and hymns will be sung, flowers will be strewn across the water and a bugle will sound that last farewell to service dead—"Taps."

Diver Michaels, Rescued at S4, Home for Christmas

Newport, R. I., Dec. 24 (I. N. S.).—Naval Diver Fred G. Michaels, who was saved from death at the scene of the S4 disaster by Diver Tom Eadie, came home for Christmas from the Chelsea Naval Hospital today.

Michaels said he was thanking his lucky stars that Eadie cut the lines when they became tangled on the floor of the ocean off Cape Cod.

"I'm feeling pretty well, but not well enough to go toy-riding in an automobile," he said.

CLINTON MAN KILLED BY HIS HUNTING PAL

Conway, S. C., Dec. 24 (A.P.).—A man named Neubauer of Clinton, Mass., an employe of the Fiske Power Construction Company at Myrtle Beach, was accidentally shot and killed by a companion named Williams in one of the season's first hunting fatalities.

MEXICAN FLIERS GREET LINDY

Mexico City, Dec. 24 (A.P.).—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh was back among the birdmen today at Cuernavaca, state of Morelos, as the guest of the Mexican air force.

The flier's earlier intended to spend the day inspecting the work of Mexican schools.

Christmas Day is expected to afford the flying colonel his first full day of rest since his arrival here more than a week ago. He and his mother intend to devote the day to relaxation.

Lindy will spend Tuesday grooming his plane for his Central American flight and devote the rest of his time to the study of maps of the territory to be covered. He will hop off for Guatemala Wednesday morning.

Tokyo, Dec. 24 (A.P.).—It is understood that negotiations are underway in Americatoday a fifty million dollar refunding loan.

SEEK FLIER IN N. E. WATERS

But the dangerous waters off New England, with a near gale kicking up giant waves, presented a danger, should the plane have to descend, that air experts said outweighed everything in the voyagers' favor.

If the plane has been forced down there is only the most minute chance conceivable for the four fliers to get ashore, it was stated.

Meteorologist James H. Kimball of New York said bluntly that he advised Mrs. Grayson not to make the flight and that she did so in spite of his repeated warning of serious dangers.

Radio stations, naval stations, cable boats and countless other places all along the cockribbed coast from Cape Cod to Newfoundland were peopled anxiously by those awaiting the plane's arrival at Harbor Grace.

NO REPLY TO RADIO.

None has seen the plane or heard any report of it since it passed over Orleans. Neither had any ships on this portion of the sea sighted the big bird, as all replied to oft repeated wireless messages.

Coast guards at Quaddy Head station, at the extreme northeast end of the coast line of the United States failed to see an, signs of The Dawn, although watch was kept up for it throughout the night and during today.

Besides Mrs. Grayson, those aboard the Dawn are Brice Goldsborough, navigator, Oskar Omdal, pilot, Fred Koehler, motor expert. Goldsborough was with Mrs. Grayson on her unsuccessful attempt at transatlantic flying last Fall.

They left Roosevelt Field, Long Island, N. Y., soon after 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. They were sighted over East Dennis, on Cape Cod, at 7:15, and over the cable station at Orleans ten minutes later, and at that moment they headed out over the ocean to what may have been their doom.

CABLE STATIONS CHECKED.

A complete check on all cable stations for information regarding the Dawn, was made by the Western Union station at Hearts Content, Newfoundland. Nothing resulted.

At one o'clock this afternoon, experts at Roosevelt Field estimated that the plane had exhausted all its 520 gallons of gasoline and must be down somewhere. They figured on an average speed of under 100 miles an hour which The Dawn made in the first few hours.

Anxiety was written on the faces of all at the field when this conclusion regarding gasoline had been made.

Hope was expressed, however, that Mrs. Grayson adhered to her expressed intention of sticking to the coast line as much as possible, thus descending on land if forced down. The facts that no ships reported seeing her airplane strengthened the hope that The Dawn descended ashore and not at sea.

BLOWN TO SEA.

But the northwest wind, which was growing stronger, made it possible that the fliers were blown out to sea, and as each hour passed, without a report from any place ashore that the plane had been sighted or had been found wrecked, made it probable that something of this sort had happened, or that the plane was cutting across open water when forced to drop.

G. A. Wittman, operator at the relay station of the French cable company at Orleans, said that the plane seen there was 200 or 300 feet inside the arm of the Cape and was headed for a point between the towns of Provincetown and Truro, —in other words, toward the open sea.

"We were not positive it was The Dawn, but thought it was and have been unable to learn of any other plane that is south here," he said.

Here's Who's Who On 'The Dawn' In Perilous Hop

New York, Dec. 24 (A.P.).—Following is a who's who aboard the amphibian plane Dawn:

Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson, half owner of plane, a young business woman whose greatest ambition has been to be the first woman to fly the Atlantic.

Brice Goldsborough, navigator and radio operator, official of the Pioneer Instrument Company, manufacturing instruments for airplanes.

Oskar Omdal, Norwegian naval officer, pilot, was with Amundsen in flight over North Pole in the Norge.

said. "It was duck, of course, and we couldn't see the name.

"If she came this way, it is true, she was not adhering to her intention of striking directly across country toward Old Orchard, Me."

There are many steamers and fishing vessels between Boston and Halifax but none reported the Dawn. The wind was blowing 40 miles an hour off shore.

Arthur W. Dale of East Dennis said he heard the motor plainly, as did other villagers. The plane was then heading northeast by north.

A direct course after leaving Cape Cod would have taken the Dawn across the mouth of Massachusetts Bay and to the tip of Nova Scotia, near Yarmouth. On this route, the fliers would have been far out to sea from any New England coastal point.

From Nova Scotia there was a choice of courses, one overland to Sydney, Cape Breton, the other along the shore past Halifax, then across 300 miles of water to Newfoundland.

Weather Man Warned Mrs. Grayson Trip Was Perilous

New York, Dec. 24 (A.P.).—Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson undertook the flight from Long Island to Newfoundland against the advice of the weather bureau, Dr. James H. Kimball, meteorologist, said today.

He expressed slight hope that The Dawn, despite its pontoons, could float without the buffeting of the waves if, as aviation observers agreed seemed likely, it made a forced landing during the night between Cape Cod and the coast of Nova Scotia.

"We did everything we could to dissuade Mrs. Grayson from attempting an ocean flight in Winter," Dr. Kimball said. "But she was very determined and over-rode our objections. In the first place we were against it, because such a flight has never been made and while it is possible conditions might become favorable during the Winter we did not believe they were so now.

"Santa Claus Will Protect Her!" Says Flier's Father

Muncie, Indiana, Dec. 24 (I. N. S.).—"Santa Claus won't let my girl get lost Christmas time," A. Wilson, father of Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson, remarked here today when informed that his daughter's monoplane "The Dawn" in which she was flying from New York to Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, was missing.

"I have every confidence in the ship and in the crew to pull through," Wilson said.

Wilson's bride, his 22-year-old former cashier, who has never met Mrs. Grayson, expressed great concern for her famous stepdaughter's

Simplified Criminology

Edward Ellis, who plays the bold bad villain in "Cock Robin," which opens Monday night at the Hollis, has enacted a long and varied assortment of stage crooks. Ellis claims that it is much easier to give the lawbreaker a convincing portrayal since Prohibition happened along.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Aware of Her Azaleas

Hearing that Betty Starbuck, who capers in "Peggy-Ann," was about to observe the Christmas spirit by hanging wreaths in the Wilbur Greenroom, Virginia Meyer exclaimed mischievously, "Betty, you know your onions." "No," corrected Miss Starbuck archly, "I know my mistletoe!"

YULETIDE DRAMA MOVES IN MYSTERIOUS WAYS---THREE NEW SHOCKERS ARRIVE

THE HAT TRICK is used to good purpose in "The Spider," new mystery play which will begin weaving its tangled web of squirmy apprehension at the Majestic on Monday night. Here are Germaine Giroux and John Halliday.

"THE LETTER" looks like bad news for Katherine Cornell at this moment. But it will be anything but that for the audience at the Plymouth when this new drama opens on Monday.

YVONNE GRAY has never caused Mr. Ziegfeld an instant's worry—she is naturally glorified. See her in "Rosalie" at the Colonial, but you had better hurry.

BENEATH CONTEMPT, but above suspicion, is Charlie Mac when De Wolf Hopper scorns him in "The Student Prince" at the Opera House Monday.

AND OVER HERE, it is our guess that Albert Tavernier got this role for Cyril Scott. The pretty lady is Dianthia Pattison. Both are in "Out of the Night" (Arlington). Step in out of the night, some evening, and see a heavy thriller.

CHILLS AND FEVER IN HOLIDAY DRAMA

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

IT matters but little how you prefer your drama. For the forthcoming two weeks, at least, you are bound to have spooks and phantoms as a regular diet, and if the girls do not buy an extra supply of hair nets there is going to be grave disappointments among Boylston street replenishing shops. For the first time in the memory of man, the spoken drama, as represented by local playhouses, is in the possession of plays designed to make the brave tremble and the timid quiver in ghastly torment. Following a week of blissful peace in which the theatre has held itself to melody and fun, the departing holiday embraces the playgoer in new forms of excitement and coaxes forth new causes for thumping pulses.

THE "why" and "wherefore" of the mystery play has been generously and ambitiously explained—with no specific solution. When "The Thirteenth Chair" first frightened the theatre goer out of his wits it was admitted that a new form of dramatic entertainment had hit the stage; when "The Bat" and "The Cat and the Canary" chased chills up and down the spines of regular customers, it was known for a fact that a new cycle of theatrical venture had arrived. As plays of peculiar and unique design have their flair, there was slight hope that the sensations of the new mystery thrillers would, or could, extend beyond the life of the distinguished progenitors. But then came "Whispering Wires" and "The Gorilla" to upset the logic of those who sit in judgment upon what makes safe and sound entertainment.

THAT the mystery play is still with us in force, please consult the current playbills. Hardened as we may be to the shocks and ghosts of the theatre, there is still "The Spider" to be considered. Even the old-fashioned, conventional crook play of deepest dye takes on a tint of pale pink in comparison. In the early days of theatrical murder the victim was slaughtered on a dimly lit stage—or close to it. Now they are more selective and hunt him down in the audience. The result is the same, but the effect is more far reaching.

IN the tender days of stage murder and consequent mystery everything was smooth sailing—just a killing or two, with the police and an occasional plain clothesman scrambling for the spotlight. The proceedings were as regular and simple as a Friday evening gathering of the Epworth League. It isn't a bit that way with the latest shockers. Everybody is disguised—even the police. The gentlemanly scientist you admire so much may be a master mind of the underworld or perhaps just plain sergeant Rafferty of the narcotic squad. The audience never knows until the last ten minutes. That is the mystery part. And even with all this stirring in the mind you may trundle home still wondering who stabbed the husband and who got the life insurance.

WHILE "The Spider" promises much that will stir the imagination, "Cock Robin," coming to the Hollis, and "Out of the Night," currently announced at the Arlington, give mystery even more attention. In the case of "Out of the Night," ghosts are dragged out of dismal Maine forests to play havoc with the nervous audience. That, of course, in these tempestuous days, is just good salesmanship.

It's a Secret

DESMOND KELLY knows who killed "Cock Robin," but she won't tell until Monday, when this new mystery show opens at the Hollis.

BOBBE ARNST STAGE BABY

A charming bit of dynamic femininity is Bobbe Arnst, featured singer and dancer in "Rosalie," at the Colonial. Miss Arnst is typical of the present day trend in dance and song. A personality that radiates happiness, a smile that never for an instant leaves her lips and feet that cannot be told to stop dancing are some of the things to which she can attribute her success. Bobbe Arnst is one of the youngest singing and dancing comediennes on the stage today. She is scarcely out of her teens, having but recently reached her twentieth birthday. Despite her youth, however, Miss Arnst has spent scarcely seventeen years of her life upon the stage.

Bobbe Arnst

Starting at the tender age of three as a child prodigy, she made her debut in what amounted to swaddling clothes. The child of stage parents, Miss Arnst had been trained to sing and dance as soon as she could utilize her voice and her legs. Though there was little difficulty in exercising the former it took a good deal of time before the latter could be made to work with the desired speed. The training, however, continued, and as Miss Arnst grew in stature her voice and dancing improved proportionately.

ALSO DOES SPYIN'

ZEKE BRAMBLE, better known as Oscar Figman without this "uniform," as artist John Moynihan sees him in "My Maryland," the popular operetta that turns Civil War into dreamy music at the Shubert.

So Pleasant

IS BUSIEST "VILLAIN"

Edward Ellis, prominent in the cast of "Cock Robin," new mystery play which Guthrie McClintic will present at the Hollis beginning Monday evening Dec. 26, is one of the best known actors on the American stage which it comes to playing potshed crooks, confidence men and post graduates from the school of sharp witted gentry. To use his own words, he sometimes wonders if it is safe for him to be alone with himself if he happens to have considerable money or jewelry on his person. In "Cock Robin," Mr. Ellis plays the part of a hard boiled showman who has been engaged to direct an amateur performance for charity at a fashionable Long Island colony and during which a member of the company is killed. It is about him that much of the suspense and mystery centers.

STAGE PAIR HAPPILY WED 34 YEARS

One of the glowing examples of happily married stage folk is found in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Waterous, who return to Boston in "The Student Prince," opening December 26th at the Boston Opera House. This couple recently celebrated their thirty-fourth wedding anniversary. They were married when both were singing in the choir of the Hyde Park Unitarian Church, Chicago. Both made their stage debut at the Olympic Theatre in the same city twenty-five years ago. Since then they have been separated since that time, each managing separate engagements in the same production. They have been appearing in "The Student Prince" for the past three years and are especially happy in returning to Boston, with this company.

Herbert Waterous

"It is all bosh to say that stage folks can't marry, continue their careers—and remain happy," says Mrs. Waterous. "Surely Mr. Waterous and I have done so during the past quarter of a century, and we propose to keep right on doing so."

Famous Gardens Filmed in New Ingram Photoplay

Four beautiful and famous gardens have been used for backgrounds of Rex Ingram's "The Garden of Allah," on the screen at Loew's Orpheum next week. The scenic and photographic beauty of this latest Ingram importation has been praised by every reviewer who has seen the film.

The gardens utilized by Ingram have their locale in the de Rothschild tropical garden at Grasse, France, the Bardo garden at Algiers, and the Arthur garden, also in Algiers.

The Biskra garden is the one so minutely described by Robert Hichens in his famous desert romance, written twenty-five years ago and read by millions. It supplied most of the garden scenes in the photoplay.

SYMPHONY IN FAMILIAR PROGRAM

By MOSES SMITH.

The two symphony concerts of this week represent something like Old Home Week, for none of the three numbers on the program was unfamiliar to the audience. A novelty, Florent Schmitt's 47th Psalm, had been announced, but was put over for later performance because of delay in the arrival of the individual parts. It was just as well that Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Scheherazade" was substituted. If the eager throngs of latecomers that filled Symphony Hall, in spite of the imminent holiday, thought anything, it was that a good old-time music fest is welcome for a change.

Bach's second Brandenburg concerto and Mendelssohn's "Italian" symphony were the other two numbers of a program which furnished a plenitude of brilliant orchestral playing, so exhilarating was the music-making that there must have been many who, like our neighbor, came out of the hall feeling "as if he were walking on air." Men have been known to feel like that with less provocation than can be remarkable version of the "Scheherazade" that is Mr. Koussevitsky's and the Boston Symphony's.

We can remember no finer solo-playing in a purely orchestral piece than that of Mr. Burgin in the opulent suite of Rimsky. Not even in the performance two years ago, when was on the whole more glowing than this week's, did the concertmaster play so beautifully. And earlier on the program, in the Bach concerto, he was the shining light, holding his own against the massed strings. Mr. Laurent, with the flute, and Mr. Gillet with the oboe were almost equally felicitous, but Mr. Mazer was having an off-day with his trumpet.

The andante of this concerto was perfectly done, an exquisitely sensitive reading by Mr. Koussevitsky. The tempo of the first movement was a shade too fast for the musical purist, who might have been seen arching an eyebrow. But once the time was set, there was no further forcing, and the mood was sustained throughout.

Mendelssohn's symphony was performed as a sort of miracle of joy, which, indeed, it is, even though the eminently proper composer would have disdained saying so.

WREATHED IN SMILES

BRIBED! This bristling minion of the law, Chester Conklin, goes the way of all flesh when Mlle. Serpentina wriggles wickedly in his direction. This is "Two Flaming Youths" at the Metropolitan.

STRIKING PORTRAYAL

THE SLUGGER here is Hammerstone Wright in "The Garden of Allah" at Loew's Orpheum. Alice Terry is called upon to dodge the shillalah or to contribute some fairly fine plucking.

Circumstantial Evidence

In "Out of the Night," the new mystery comedy at the Arlington, Spencer Charters, as the town "constabule," is offered a drink of questionable gin. He downs it with diffidence. At that moment it is time for the lights to go out and—"Gosh take it," he moans, "I've gone blind!"

STAGE AND SCREEN

Organic Disturbance

Before Manager A. W. Lauder of the Keith-Albee Boston discovered the office cat high up in the dome of the theatre, where it was "treed" for three days, he simply had to try one means of silencing the mournful noises heard throughout the house—he had the organ tuned.

WEEK'S FILM HEROES ARE KNIGHTLY LOT---JOUSTS AND JESTS IN ASSORTMENT

WOOD ALCOHOL? "The Valley of the Giants" (at the 2 Olympias) is a Peter B. Kyne story of the tall timbers. Milton Sills and Arthur Stone assemble for some serious drinking. Not fatal, we hope.

THIS QUESTION has been answered before, but for the benefit of newcomers it is "Love" as we know it in the movies. John Gilbert grabs Greta Garbo. (Loew's State).

POSITION, as Charles Rogers might tell you in "Wings," (Tremont) is important. Charlie's wings appear to be comfortably placed. Clara Bow may be telling him, "naughty, naughty!" but she doesn't mean it.

MILITARY TACTICS in "Dress Parade" at the Boston are all embracing—as you may judge from William Boyd and Bessie Love.

"SAILOR IZZY MURPHY" at the Modern and Beacon is now a member of the Admiralty. He is George Jessel, and his uniform becomes him about as well as plus-fours on a bow-legged golfer. He prefers hors d'oeuvres to manoeuvres. He also likes the ladies.

HAIR AND HARNESS IN HOLLYWOOD

By LEO GAFFNEY

BY their haircuts you will know them. There are all kinds in Hollywood, and the barbers are second in importance only to the lawyers in the actor's scheme of things. Before the busy artist begins creating each new role, the temperamental tonsor is called upon for some highly expressive and necessary decoration. Some players get a fresh trim for every production; others can't do this very well because they are always playing the same character, essentially.

JOHN GILBERT is one of the chief variants. 'Tis haircuts might be called promisory—even portentous. As the philandering Captain Vronsky in the film of Tolstoi's Anna Karenina (the movie men call it "Love") at Loew's State next week, Mr. Gilbert has resumed the same hirsute style he used in "The Merry Widow"— for no good purpose the knowing ones will say.

IN the new clip Gilbert will be fairly destitute in the region of the ears—army fashion—in order to bring out the harder lines of the face and match the dashing ferocity of Russian military spangles. To confirm your first impression of such a figure there is likely to be a pair of explanatory gentlemen seen in the early sequences. You may imagine them as hearty, Russian-bloused fellows with a large sweep of itchy looking whisker. They ought to stand close together and cast their eyes sidewise at each other while twisting a fringe of beard apiece. Then, in a subtitle, "say, Vestoff, old chap, have you noticed young Vronsky, lately?" "Indeed," from the other bearded party, "and what a devil he is with the ladies!" From which you may gather that John Gilbert, Greta Garbo and artistic raiders are about to start the day right. The barber began it all!

ANOTHER good, heady player is William Boyd. For his ruffianly role in "The Volga Boatman" he chose a large shock of glistening tuftage that spread out like an O'Cedar mop in action. He would have been useful in any home; for he need only nod at the parlor furniture to have it dusted. As the burly West Pointer in "Dress Parade" at the Keith-Albee Boston, little of the "boat-many" crop remains. The angled foliage has been conquered and, as the poetic title writer might phrase it, has been smoothed down "as Summer rains beat flat the meadow grass." Which is pretty sentiment if you can stand it.

MILTON SILLS, on the other hand, does not have to be barbered oftener or with any more versatility than the average salesman. In "The Valley of the Giants" at the two Olympias Mr. Sills enacts He Man number 874, or thereabouts. His public wants him that way; he is the ideal Peter B. Kyne hero.

* * *

ANOTHER who must not change his cinematic nature is Chester Conklin, one of the "Two Flaming Youths" today at the Metropolitan. He is nearly bald, yet his requirements in hair are far more tricky than any player in the time. For years Mr. Conklin has trained up a moustache in the way it should grow—if he could get it to grow. Legend has it that the Conklin bristles are not home grown, but that he has grafted to his upper lips a secret species of ruminous which he has obtained by crossing finely spun camel's hair with a certain make of tooth brush. However, up to a late hour last night this had not been confirmed.

Playful Title in New Gayety Burlesque

"Although the caption of our entertainment is 'Bare Facts,'" said Tessie Sherman at the Gayety, "there is more of anticipation than suggestion in what the title might imply. It may be presupposed that the 'facts' apply to the female form but the wise woman knows that to be most effective in its appeal to the opposite sex the feminine figure must ever be evasive in its displays. That's why Dame Fash ion is forever decreeing a change in style of gowns. At times the skirts are short; then shorter and with sheerness below comes bodices that are cut high. Again when the lower draperies approach nearer the ground there is a corresponding deep taking place in the upper garment. And so gown styles are ever changing, concealing then revealing—all to keep man guessing and keeping him optically ensnared."

STAGE AND SCREEN

Posies With Purpose

When it became known that last Monday evening was the twenty-seventh anniversary of Tom Lothian's management of the Colonial the great multitude of his friends piled his office high with flowers. And for that reason the genial manager has worn fresh boutonnieres all week.

Once a Saxophonist

Having been a saxophonist "in his day," Enid Gray of the Metropolitan staff is able to give advice. He was annoyed by the blatant practicing of the boy next door and, having a kindly nature, first called upon the youth and cautioned thusly, "Son, it's an ill wind that blows a saxophone!"

THE MUSICAL COMEDY IS EVOLVED

By HERBERT FIELDS
Author of "Peggy-Ann."

I believe, first of all, that the book should be the backbone of the show. I am much opposed to writing a play in rehearsal, having someone say "I'll do this and you do that" or "I think this material in the last act will do better in the first" or "Take your stuff from vaudeville and use it in this spot."

No, that is not my idea of musical comedy construction, and I don't really believe that it brings forth the best musical comedy. As a matter of fact, I personally go about the writing of a book of musical comedy as I would a more pretentious work. I cannot say where my ideas come from, but after I get them, I aim to work them out with all the intensity and care that I would give to a piece of real literature.

Out of the central idea that comes to me, the characters unfold, spring forth, and from these in turn the situations and a fairly specific plot. I let all these matters remain in my mind and I turn them over and over. But instead of immediately writing down the lines, I sometimes dress the whole thing from my mind entirely for a time and pigeonhole unconsciously the various fragments of material.

Then at some later day I draw all these things out of the pigeonhole again, dust them off, look them over again and actually find to my gratification that they begin to take form. The characters that I once created begin to take matters in their own hands and before I know it they walk away with the show. The characters once conceived, I start writing the book and dialogue. Of course, the difficult part of the dialogue is writing the laughs. This is the ticklish business. There's a hair's breath between a real laugh and nothing at all.

The writing of the lyrics is something of a chancey matter. In days gone by, they were written before the melody, just as one would write a formal poetic lyric. Now they are usually written afterwards.

After the book is done, then comes the music. And when we are ready for that, Richard Rodgers, Lorenz Hart and myself sit down and make out a tentative schedule of musical numbers.

Russian Symphonic Choir to Give Charity Concert

The Russian Symphonic Choir, Basile Kibalchich, conductor, will give a charity concert at Symphony Hall on Sunday evening, January 15, under the auspices of the Beth Israel Hospital Women's Auxiliary.

Aaron Richmond, concert manager, who is supervising the appearance of the choir, announces a varied program of unusual interest.

Mrs. Theresa Cohen Whitman is chairman of the auxiliary committee in charge of arrangements, and is assisted by Mrs. John Slater, vice-chairman; Mrs. I. K. F. Prager, secretary; Mrs. N. H. Gordon, treasurer; Mrs. David M. Small, publicity chairman, and Mrs. Louis Green, ticket chairman, who, in turn, has the assistance of a large group of auxiliary members.

Tansman Will Appear in Next Symphony Program

The next pair of concerts of the regular series of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on Thursday evening, December 29th, instead of Saturday, in order not to conflict with the New Year's eve holiday, and on Friday afternoon, December 30th.

The guest composer and soloist of these concerts will be Alexander Tansman whose music is already familiar to this public. He will then give the first public

Relishes a Good Cry When Playing Sad Roles

Most actresses like to be merry and bright on the stage, but Clara Joel, leading lady of the Keith-Albee stock company of the St. James, is never happier than when portraying the life of an unhappy woman.

She says that most women have a fear of being unhappy through death and financial reverses and she finds that most women like to cry a little bit at the theatre. Parts which call for her to cry are particularly pleasing to her, for she enjoys weeping—on the stage.

LENA DALEY prances at the head of the "Bare Facts" burlesk hew troupe at the Gayety.

Lucas Studies Oratory and Wins on the Stage

Rupert Lucas, member of the E. E. Clive company at the Copley, finds that the study of oratory he undertook at Westmoreland College in England has proven an important factor in his work on the stage.

"It is something," Mr. Lucas said, in speaking of the study, "that everyone must learn whether or not he attends a school of elocution or whether he "picks it up" on the stage. At any rate, to have oratorical ability when you enter on a stage career is a very valuable asset."

Dorothy Speare Will Sing in Concerts at Symphony

To readers of "Dancers in the Dark," "The Enchanted Isles" and other best sellers written by Dorothy Speare, the announcement by the Women's Council of Boston University that she will be presented under their auspices in Symphony Hall, Boston, in a song recital comes somewhat as a surprise unless they are familiar with recent developments in the young Newton author's career. Within the past year Miss Speare has developed into an opera singer of high attainment. She has had eminently successful appearances in Italy and France, and only last week the Associated Press carried to the front pages of newspapers throughout the United States the story of her triumph

The Love Story of Emily Day of Dedham, by a Noted Writer of Romance

CHAPTER 12

BUT there were new friends, Frances Hollen was responsible for that. This woman with the angular appreciation of beauty, established Emily in the salon in her house.

"You must meet new people, dear. Those you know in Dedham are all very well, but you must talk with others who do things. Both are important. Character unfolds as ideas develop and those must rub against other ideas for complete unfoldment."

"Who your friends all are ever grant, dear Frances. I don't know even how I could think of anything to talk about."

"A girl as pretty as you are need not trouble with subjects. Just let your personality expand. Be yourself and you will be interesting. Learn to dress and you will get about designing a frock of your own. Learn the color that becomes you and never mind the rest. Dress for instinct. Throw on a veil running down across the eyes and look mysterious."

CHRISTMAS EVE! The Night of Nights! Throughout the entire civilized world spreads a wave of joy, of well-wishing toward one's fellow men on this annual observance of Christ's birth. Eyes sparkle, cheeks are rosy, cheery words are on every tongue, minds are filled with happy thoughts.

C. For the children it is the climax of a long-anticipated event—their little faces are alight as they hang their stockings for the good Santa Claus to fill. Rich and poor alike are making merry—preparing gifts for friends and loved ones—planning for the Christmas feast on the morrow.

C. If electric service is making the holiday more merry, we are glad.

To our customers and employees, we extend the season's best greetings. Merry Christmas to you all!

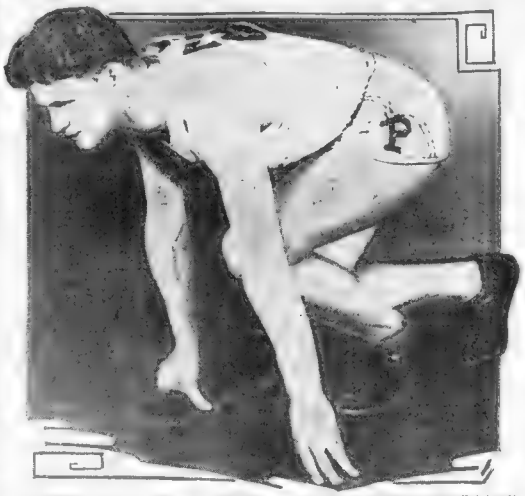
BOSTON'S OWN LEADING DASH MAN



COMPETING AGAINST NARROW GAUGE TRAINS GAVE RALPH His start in the sprint game. This East Boston youth and Bayes Norton of Martha's Vineyard are New England's hopes in the Olympic furlong competition. Colson is a former East Boston High athlete discovered and developed by Fred L. ("Snappy") O'Brien, East Boston High coach. Colson later attended Allen Military Academy and from there entered the University of Pennsylvania, where Lawson Robertson, present Olympic coach, directs track athletics. Ralph failed to finish his course at Penn, but he established himself as a crack 220-yard man.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

"IF YOU chose, what would you take
Of all earth's best delight,
If you could leave grief, care and ache,
From sunbeam of the night?"

"Oh, I would take the worldly way
Of ease and of gain,
In reverse seeking I would stray
By all the lords and dames!"

"And I would choose," another cries,
"The lofty road of art,
I want the way where shining lies,
To play a glorious part!"

"For me, I would not ask to know
The path and the goal,
Down journeying where I must go
Art means my whole!"

"But I would choose, or if I range
All fear all blight, all pain,
To each my choice would be mine
And be a happy gain!"

Jack Holt Forsakes Western Roles

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

LOS ANGELES Dec. 24—With the hue and cry that Westerns are the vogue it is interesting to know that Jack Holt has put aside his sombrero and chaps for straight roles. He has been identified with the Western thrillers for so many years it is difficult to visualize him in regular clothes. Yet, his new contract, signed with Columbia, calls for five pictures—all of them straight dramas and away from the beaten path of usual Holt stories.

I HEARD when I was in New York that Lew would sign a new contract as soon as he finished his vaudeville tour. He was shooted with Irving Thalberg long enough yesterday to sign a dozen new contracts, but then these important papers do take time.

I HAVE always thought some fine day Fred Astaire would wake up and discover that Ross Merle with some of the best dramatic material in this part of the country. Merle has been trying to get Astaire to sign a contract to appear in the screen version of his play, to be directed by Alexander Korda.

THE Prince of Wales has a sense of humor. You don't say, by looking at his photograph. Further proof, however, is the reason he gave for not attending the premiere of the Chaplin picture. At first it was announced that he was ill, but later it was explained that he was not feeling well enough to attend. Then it was announced that he was not feeling well enough to attend. Then it was announced that he was not feeling well enough to attend. Then it was announced

His Birthday Tomorrow

To Little Children, Christmas is Santa Claus and lots of presents, happiness and anticipation. To grown-ups, years of combined Christmas and birthday joy mixed all down in the year.

On December 25th the world rejoices and the Christ child that was in that poor manger at Bethlehem.

The world looks back with reverence and love to the figure of Jesus, the man who came to bring to all the people of the world the message of peace on earth, good will toward men.

The world looks forward with confidence and hope to the noble work that is being done by the League of Nations, by the Conference on the Limitation of Armaments, by the Permanent Court of International Justice, by the Pan American Union, by the Hague Tribunal, by the Locarno Treaties, by the Kellogg Pact, by the Conference of Christian Churches, by the Young Men's Christian Association, by the Salvation Army, by the Red Cross, by the Boy Scouts, by the Girl Scouts, by the Campfire Girls, by the Knights of Columbus, by the Jewish Welfare Board, by the Rotary Clubs, by the Lions, by the Kiwanis, by the Exchange Clubs, by the Boosters, by the Optimists, by the Chambers of Commerce, by the Boards of Trade, by the Parent-Teacher Associations, by the Women's Clubs, by the Men's Clubs, by the Boys' Clubs, by the Girls' Clubs, by the Sunday Schools, by the Churches, by the Synagogues, by the Labor Unions, by the Employers' Associations, by the Social Workers, by the Welfare Workers, by the Public Health Nurses, by the Visiting Nurses, by the Settlement Workers, by the Probation Officers, by the Juvenile Court Judges, by the Police Departments, by the Fire Departments, by the Boards of Health, by the Boards of Education, by the Boards of Charities, by the Boards of Aldermen, by the Boards of Selectmen, by the Boards of Overseers of the Poor, by the Boards of Assessors, by the Boards of Public Works, by the Boards of Park Commissioners, by the Boards of Water Commissioners, by the Boards of Sewer Commissioners, by the Boards of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners, by the Boards of Street Railway Commissioners, by the Boards of Transportation, by the Boards of Railroad Commissioners, by the Boards of Public Utilities, by the Boards of Harbor and Land Commissioners, by the Boards of Port Authority, by the Boards of Metropolitan Planning, by the Boards of Zoning Adjustment, by the Boards of Appeal, by the Boards of Examiners, by the Boards of Registration, by the Boards of Election Commissioners, by the Boards of Civil Service Commissioners, by the Boards of Pension Commissioners, by the Boards of Retirement, by the Boards of Trustees, by the Boards of Directors, by the Boards of Governors, by the Boards of Regents, by the Boards of Visitors, by the Boards of Inspectors, by the Boards of Supervisors, by the Boards of Commissioners, by the Boards of Arbitration, by the Boards of Conciliation, by the Boards of Mediation, by the Boards of Adjustment, by the Boards of Review, by the Boards of Appeals, by the Boards of Grievances, by the Boards of Complaints, by the Boards of Petitions, by the Boards of Requests, by the Boards of Suggestions, by the Boards of Recommendations, by the Boards of Advice, by the Boards of Counsel, by the Boards of Consultation, by the Boards of Conference, by the Boards of Discussion, by the Boards of Debate, by the Boards of Argument, by the Boards of Persuasion, by the Boards of Influence, by the Boards of Power, by the Boards of Authority, by the Boards of Command, by the Boards of Control, by the Boards of Direction, by the Boards of Management, by the Boards of Administration, by the Boards of Execution, by the Boards of Enforcement, by the Boards of Obedience, by the Boards of Submission, by the Boards of Surrender, by the Boards of Defeat, by the Boards of Failure, by the Boards of Ruin, by the Boards of Destruction, by the Boards of Annihilation, by the Boards of Extinction, by the Boards of Oblivion, by the Boards of Nothingness, by the Boards of Void, by the Boards of Emptiness, by the Boards of Vacuum, by the Boards of Space, by the Boards of Infinity, by the Boards of Eternity, by the Boards of God.

We who are living in the world celebrate tonight the birth in poverty of a child who was destined to be hated and persecuted.

Be merciful, be kind, you think of the first name

AND PROVE YOUR GRATITUDE BY DOING SOME THING

Help some poor child, some poor woman, some old man in need. Even if you do not know about you, prove that you appreciate the gift of the world's most beautiful day.

It has been said that the best measure of the American people's worthiness is by the sentiment and desperate devotion to the memories of

The elements, tornadoes, floods and continued depression have been blamed by the religious of many, but the true and continued devotion on the part of both the victims and those who strive to overcome and control the forces of nature.

Let us hope that the coming year will be a year of recognition of the true things of life. They will in the end justify defeat and bring the world forward in

May we also hope that we will have good news in the immediate results in the production of the necessities of life, in the case of the

The ability to live to the full extent of the essence of life, which is the ability to work.

Some measure can surely be found to keep men and women of the presence of production and the distribution of the world's goods.

Happy Christmas!

Time and custom have made Christmas the children's festival, and so our first wish is that the little people may be happy.

Next in order, our Christmas good wishes go out to the great army of parents, mothers and fathers, of New England whose loving devotion gives the lie to the cynics who scoff with crocodile tears at the home life of the American people.

We wish a happy Christmas to the Governors of our States, the Mayors of our cities, the members of our Legislatures, the New England delegation at Washington, members of the Army, the Navy and the Marine Corps, the boys and girls of the All Mod, policemen and firemen, physicians and nurses, letter carriers and postal clerks, the foreign staffs of public, parochial and private schools, the ministers, clergy, the editorial staffs of our states papers and press, reporters and editors, the commercial and industrial leaders of New England and the great army of men and women who have created the industries of these States to build a place of leadership and have invested capital in

May there be no one among us on the holiday so strange, so much alone, so unwelcome or so forlorn that at least one friend may not look in upon him to say, "Merry Christmas!"

The Christmas toast of Tiny Tim will NEVER be improved upon.

"God bless us, every one!"

VOICES and ORGAN
It came upon the midnight clear, That glo-rious song of old,—
Down from the mansions bright they come, With peace-ful wings un-furl'd;—
And still their heav'n-ly load, Whose forms are bend-ing low,—
Still through the cloven skies they come, By proph-ets seen of old,—
And touch their harps of gold:—
All over the wear-y world:—
With pain-ful steps and slow!—
Look now, for glad and gold-en hours come the time fore-told,— Heav'n's all-gra-cious King."—
Now they bend on hov-'ring wing.—
Swift-ly on the wing:—
Hail the sacred birth of their King,—
The world in sol-emn still-ness lay To hear the an-gels sing.—
And yet the years roll on, roll on, The bless-ed an-gels sing.—
O hush the noise, ye men of strife, And hear the an-gels sing.—
And ye, beneath life's crush-ing load, Whose forms are bend-ing low,—
